At 41/2 she's reading 3rd grade books

a child prodigy? not at all! your child. too can be reading one, two or three years beyond present age level...even if a "poor" reader now

Prove it to yourself . . . with this 10 day free trial!

Reading is fun for Sarah—as it should be for every child. At age four-and-a-half, she's already choosing her own books at the San Diego, Cal. library.

She reads books many third graders find "hard going." Yet she won't enter first grade for another year.

Sarah is typical of thousands of children who learned to read with "Listen and Learn with Phonics"—a reading kit that actually makes reading fun.

"Listen and Learn with Phonics" was developed by a reading expert. It has been endorsed, after extensive testing, by teachers, schools, and educators.

This practical (and inexpensive) homelearning kit fascinates eager young minds from three to ten. The child hears the letters or sounds on a cassette, sees them in a book and then repeats them. This makes an absorbing game of better reading with amazing results.

For example: Slow or average readers show sudden-often spectacular-im-provement in reading and spelling. Older children often advance their reading skills several years beyond their age level. Young "pre-schoolers" actually teach themselves to read by this simple but startingly effective method.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

I am tremendously pleased. My 5-year old is reading very well and I plan to begin with my 4-year old. I am so glad I invested in this set. Judy I. Gay, Stow, Oh.

Last year I taught grades 1-4. I had a 6-year old boy who came to 1st grade reading 6th-grade words. His father had taught him at home using your set. The father donated the set to our school. I was thrilled because some of the children need a lot of extra help with reading and phonics.

Janet Griffin, Triangle School, Apex. N.C.

What a happy Grandma I am! Since I ordered a Phonics set and had it mailed to my granddaughter. Kim, and her 6-year old sister, they are both making A's in school. Mrs. Clarence Sparks, Clearwater, Fl.

Your company has the best teaching method I have found. Thank you for offering such quality educa-tional materials. Mrs. Joseph Vandenbush, Green Bay, Wisc.

SPECIAL PARENTS' GUIDE

A 32-page Parents' Guide is included. However, you don't need special teaching skills to use this program. Nor do you need any special knowledge of phonics.

In fact, your child needs no special supervision on your part. This set is so simple, so fascinating, children can learn "on their own" without help.

10-DAY FREE TRIAL WITH MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE!

Results are so dramatic, the publishers will make the complete kit available to your child with an equally dramatic FREE trial and guarantee.

Parton appeal

ane Fonda produced that movie," Dolly Parton fondly recalls of 9 to 5, her film debut, which airs on The Disney Channel in January. "She had a definite idea of getting a country girl with a lot of strength and power, so she approached me." The rest was history-Parton proved a delightful screen presence, more than capable of holding her own with co-stars Fonda and Lily Tomlin. "I had never even seen a movie made before," Parton says, "so even if I do something that wins an award, nothing will ever be as special as that.'

Parton continues to prove her capabilities as an actress-witness her latest performance in Herb Ross's film Steel Magnolias, which features Parton, Daryl Hannah, Sally Field, Shirley MacLaine and Olympia Dukakis. But whatever the future holds for Parton's acting career, a sequel to 9 to 5 doesn't appear in her plans.

"When you do something great, you don't know if it's wise to go back," Parton points out. "I've never liked sequels-and I've often said I don't like to chew my tobacco twice."

A father and son reunion

n Six Pack (airing on The Disney Channel in January), country music great Kenny Rogers plays a race car driver who ends up taking care of six youngsters and their older sister. There's a certain poignancy to this family film: Rogers himself has suffered the pangs of separation-and reunion-with his son, Kenny Rogers Jr., whom he'd been parted from after the dissolution of Rogers's first marriage. In fact, Rogers pere and fils recently co-starred in a network Christmas special.

"When Kenny was 12," Rogers says, "his mother and I ended our marriage, and I didn't see him again until he was 18. At the time of the divorce, I was told Kenny didn't want to see me. When we finally sought each other out, he said what I'd been told wasn't true. Now we're sorting out our problems."

Elizabeth Shue

n Double Switch (airing in February). Elizabeth Shue is a young lady who might just be confused when two young men switch places-a teenage rock star and the winner of his lookalike contest. Shue is the talented young actress whose past credits include Adventures in Babysitting and Cocktail (that last with Tom Cruise and Bryan Brown). But Shue, a former gymnast, laughs when asked about her acting career.

"I don't consider this a career," she says. "I just look at each project separately and decide if I want to be involved." We suspect that Shue will be making a lot of decisions on upcoming projects-protests aside, her career has taken off.

DISNEY'S YOUNG PEOPLE'S GUIDE TO MUSIC

Roger Rabbit meets conductor Rachael Worby and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra

ou may not think he's musical, but Roger Rabbit claims to be a virtuoso on one instrument. Of course, the first citizen of Toon Town plays the kazoo-which isn't a real instrument at all. So when Roger tries to conduct the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra in The Greatest Band in the Land, the first of Disney's Young People's Guide to Music concert specials, the result is a predictable cacophony: a wall of sound in no known key that's ... well ... noise.

Fortunately, conductor Rachael Worby is on hand to act as Roger's guide to the orchestra, introducing him-and an audience of youngsters—to the instruments that compose the band and to music by Rossini (the William Tell Overture), Mozart (Eine Kleine Nacht Musik), Benjamin Britten (A Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra), and Handel (Music For the Royal Fireworks). The special premieres Thursday, February 15, at 7:30 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time).

Rachael Worby, currently the conductor of the Wheeling, West Virginia, Symphony Orchestra, organized young people's concerts at Carnegie Hall in New York for a period of six years. "The key is all in the presentation," she remarks. "There must be a high quality and a commitment to the performance. You also have to understand a young audience. There's a balance you have to maintain between presenting them with information to absorb and allowing them to discharge their emotions. A concert is an experience for them, and I encourage an informal atmosphere—I tell teachers, for example, that young people should feel free to clap and to get out of their seat. It's unrealistic to expect them to sit still the whole time." One thing that Worby emphasizes is that "young people are hungry to be inspired, always.

"I love children and I love music," she says. "I have miraculously found a way to communicate my love of music to children—and my love of children to my music."

Whether you're a serious Wizard of Oz collector—or just catching the "Oz fever"—"50 Years of Oz" is the Golden Anniversary commemorative that's a "must-have."

In brilliant color and breathtaking detail, cinematic art master Thomas Blackshear has captured radiant "Dorothy," her cuddly dog "Toto," and all the principal characters from Oz: "Cowardly Lion," "Tin Man," "Scarecrow," "Wicked Witch of the West," "Glinda the Good Witch," and the "Wizard" himself in his hot air balloon! The Emerald City glows in the background as all the characters gather 'round to wish a "happy Golden anniversary" to the most-watched movie of all time!

Crafted on a flawless "canvas" of fine porcelain, "Fifty Years of Oz" boasts a shining 8mm 23K border etched with the officially authorized commemorative wording, "Somewhere Over the Rainbow-1939-1989." The plate is being issued in honor of this treasured film's 50th anniversary.

Over the past five decades, Wizard of Oz memorabilia items have been among the strongest price gainers on the American auction market: for example, a pair of "Dorothy's" ruby slippers sold for $165,000! Indeed, so active is the demand for fine Wizard of Oz collectibles like "Fifty Years of Oz" that they often sell out quite promptly.

"Fifty Years of Oz" is The Officially Authorized commemorative plate celebrating the Golden Anniversary. Offered by The Hamilton Collection, in association with MGM and Turner Entertainment, the plate is destined to stir happy memories of this beloved film for generations to come.

There is no risk in responding to this special offer: The Hamilton Collection 100% Buy-Back Guarantee assures that you may return any plate for a full refund, within 30 days of its receipt.

Considering the booming market for Wizard of Oz collectibles, you are advised to act promptly in acquiring this plate for yourself and your loved ones. To avoid disappointment. send in your order today!

ARCHIVES

Dave Smith, The Walt Disney Company archivist, answers questions about the company's history and its film productions.

Did Walt Disney invent the name Jiminy Cricket?

-C.F., Mountainside, NJ

Before Walt Disney selected Jiminy Cricket as the name for Pinocchio's pal (and conscience), the phrase was used as an exclamation denoting surprise or bewilderment. According to the Oxford English Dictionary, the phrase has been around since 1848! Incidentally, in the Disney film, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, made over two years before Pinocchio, the dwarfs exclaim "Jiminy Crickets!" when they return to their cottage and find the lights on.

Where did Walt Disney get the idea for the name Mouseketeers?—S.C., Trenton, NJ

Way back in 1936, Walt Disney made a Silly Symphony cartoon called Three Blind Mouseketeers. The title was a takeoff on both The Three Musketeers and "Three Blind Mice." No doubt he remembered that title when he was planning the Mickey Mouse Club. We have in the Archives a memo from Walt dated April 15, 1955, in which he says, "The talented kids on the Mickey Mouse Club Show will be called Mouseketeers." The TV program began six months later.

Is Mickey Mouse right-handed or left-handed?

—J.O., Alameda, CA
Mickey Mouse is usually drawn right-handed, but sometimes there are situations where he works better left-handed. It is easy to take such liberties with an animated character.

What happened to the House of the Future and the smaller version of Autopia that used to be at Disneyland?—L.G., Moreno Valley, CA

The House of the Future was removed from Disneyland in 1967; by then it was 10 years old and no longer quite so "futuristic." Midget Autopia was removed in 1960 because space was needed for other things. Walt Disney donated that ride to his childhood town of Marceline, Missouri, where it was installed in a city park.

Can you tell me what was used to create the sound of the dragon's teeth snapping in Sleeping Beauty?

-J.W., Lakewood, CA

To answer your question, we went right to the "dragon" himself—sound effects man Jimmy Macdonald. Macdonald said he used ebony castanets, the kind that are on a handle rather than the kind you hold in your hand. This way he had complete control, and could match whatever tempo the action required. You might also like to know that the sound of the dragon's flame-breath was created with a government-issue flamethrower!

DISNEY CHANNEL TRIVIA

Joaquin Garay III, the 11-yearold who played a pint-sized pickpocket in *Herbie Goes Ba*nanas (see page 59), followed a family tradition by working at the Disney Studio. His father, Joaquin Garay II, provided the voice for Panchito, the pistolpackin' parrot, in Disney's The Three Caballeros (1945).

DISNEYLAND TRIVIA MAIN STREET U.S.A.

- Great Moments with Mr. Lincoln had its beginning as an attraction at the 1964 New York World's Fair. The Audio-Animatronics Abraham Lincoln proved so popular that a second figure was built to open at Disneyland while the first one was still performing at the fair.
- Walt Disney used the windows above the Main Street shops to honor the key people involved in designing and building Disneyland. Some of the captions under the names are inside jokes, such as the listing "Bait Co." under the name of a man whose hobby was fly fishing.
- Walt Disney's offices are reproduced in the Walt Disney Story attraction just as they were when he used them at the Disney Studio in Burbank. Even the original wall-paneling was moved to Disneyland for the reproduction.

Readers who have questions about Disney history and trivia can write to Dave Smith, c/o The Walt Disney Archives, 500 South Buena Vista Street, Burbank, CA

DISNEY NIGHT TIME

Every evening at 9:00 p.m., The Disney Channel presents a distinctive mix of entertainment for adults.

Grant and Fontaine in Suspicion.

■ Mystery Night debuts

Beginning January 2, Disney Night Time devotes Tuesday evenings at 9:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time) to Mystery Night. Mystery Night features the finest in suspense and mystery movies—and series—both contemporary and classic.

Kicking off Mystery Night is a tribute to Agatha Christie. Five films form the tribute, and three feature the delightful-and delightfully eccentric-Dame Margaret Rutherford as the definitive Miss Jane Marple. Hercule Poirot, Christie's other great fictional creation, makes an appearance in Sidney Lumet's 1974 adaptation of Murder on the Orient Express. Albert Finney portrays Poirot. Diana Rigg and Sir Ralph Richardson are the stars of Witness for the Prosecution, Christie's courtroom drama of love and murder.

February is rounded out by a three-film tribute to a cinematic maestro of suspense, Alfred Hitchcock. The Hitchcock tribute is a film buff's delight: The Man Who Knew Too Much, Hitchcock's original 1934 version; Suspicion, starring one of Hitchcock's favorite actors, Cary Grant; and North By Northwest, with Hitchcock interweaving black humor with horror.

"I always wanted to do something different," Burt Lancaster says. "I chose roles in terms of what I wanted to do and be as an actor, not as a screen personality." At age 76 Lancaster continues to stun and confound critics and moviegoers with his protean talents—witness his recent performance in Field of Dreams.

Lancaster is the subject of a film tribute running on Disney Night Time in January. Three of his earlier pictures—The Flame and the Arrow, The Crimson Pirate, and Gunfight at the O.K. Corral—appear on The Best of Hollywood. The recent Rocket Gibraltar also airs on Disney Night Time. The Disney Channel Magazine spoke with Lancaster shortly after his return from Paris, where he had been working on Tony Richardson's TV movie The Phantom of the Opera.

'We took the idea of the William Tell story and made it into the story of a mountain man in Northern Italy fighting the local conqueror," Lancaster recalls of The Flame and the Arrow. "It was a spoof of sorts on swashbucklers. But it was written in such a lovely, graceful style that the picture warranted a piece by Bosley Crowther of The New York Times. Swashbucklers were taken at face value then, entertaining and so forth, but not worthy of such distinction. We enjoyed the picture so much, we decided to do the same thing again with The Crimson Pirate.'

That bravura movie was swashbuckler and spoof par excellence—and it remains a favorite with movie fans, many of whom, as children, first encountered the film as a staple of Saturday movie matinees on TV.

"We went at it straight out and did it purely for laughs," Lancaster says. "It was a wonderful story—the pirate who succumbs to the charms of a beautiful lady and leads the oppressed people to liberty while battling the evil Spanish fleet. And the wonderful, eccentric scientist, a Ben Franklin-type of character, always explaining how things are done in terms of Aristotle while developing these astonishing inventions. We turned a swash-buckler into a madcap tale. It was great fun.

"I was under contract to Mr. Hal Wallis," Lancaster says of The Gunfight at the O.K. Corral. He adds, "It was a typical Western, and I was a typical Western hero"—in this case Wyatt Earp.

Rocket Gibraltar, in which he played a dying grandfather, is an example of Lancaster's approach to acting in his eighth decade. It's an approach that stresses small quality parts over major starring roles. "I read the script, and there was a different flavor to it that appealed to me. That's why I wanted to do it. The kids were the ones in that picture—they were so beautiful and healthy and normal—they brought it together.

It had "a different flavor that appealed to me," says Burt Lancaster of his role in Rocket Gibraltar.

"I'm 76 years old," Lancaster laughs, "and I'm not going to be making anything like From Here to Eternity again, playing a romantic leading role. At my age, when something comes along that's interesting and different—not garbage—you take it. It's all you can expect."

■ Screening Notes

Ready Steady Go! continues in January and February on Sunday Night Showcase. The British rock series (1963-67) features such legendary figures as the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, the Who, the Dave Clark Five, and the Beach Boys. Two highlights: a Ready Steady Go! special on January 14, at 9:30 p.m., on Otis Redding, and The Beatles Live! This last is a U.S. television premiere (February 4, at 9:00 p.m.) featuring rare concert footage of the Fab Four.

9 to 5 airs on Disney Night Time in January. Jane Fonda, Lily Tomlin, and Dolly Parton (in her film debut) are the three secretaries who turn the tables on their tyrannical boss, played by Dabney Coleman.

George Burns, Art Carney, and Lee Strasberg play three senior citizens who banish the boredom in their lives by robbing a bank in Going in Style. The 1979 comedy, directed by Martin Brest, has some unexpected twists.

And finally, The Best of Hollywood features three Doris Day classics in February: Please Don't Eat the Daisies, Billy Rose's Jumbo, and Do Not Disturb. Day's co-stars are, respectively, David Niven, Stephen Boyd, and Rod Taylor.

Learning Education at home

As part of our salute to the American teacher, we want to also focus on how parents can help at home with a child's learning. Teachers can't do the job alone: without the support of interested parents they're often fighting a losing battle. And yet at this difficult time, when many teachers have classes that are uncomfortably large and when they are too often called upon to teach too many courses, parental assistance has dropped off. Not only are mothers not around during the day to help out at school, they, along with fathers, frequently are not home until evening, when children are already getting tired.

What follows is a list of suggestions for helping with a child's education, even when you don't have the time:

 If you work, and your child is not in an after-school program that helps kids with homework, arrange a time when the child can call to let you know what homework he or she has. This simple phone call serves three purposes: 1) The child is accountable for his work. 2) If there is an assignment that's troublesome, you may be able to allay fears or give a suggestion for how to get started. 3) It lets you know what's ahead for the evening: You're not greeted with demands for help just when you've bought the ingredients to make the family's favorite dinner.

If you're at home in the afternoon, ask about homework when your child gets home from school, so you can decide together when and how the work will get done.

· Set aside a place for your child to work. If he doesn't like to be alone in his room, have a regular place where he can work quietly near you.

· Be sure to attend school meetings scheduled to inform parents about what their children are doing. Not only is it important for children to know that their parents care, it closes the circle drawn around teacher, child, and parent: everyone has the same information about the work, subject can sometimes inhibit a youngster.) A child feels good about being able to explain what he has learned. It's also excellent practice for him or her to try to put a lesson into her own words.

If the child has trouble explaining, or maybe even if he doesn't, you can express interest about teachers' and parents' expectations, and about any difficulties that may exist. Such meetings come up infrequently enough that it's important to participate if at all possible.

 Perhaps most important of all is to show an interest in what your child is learning. Some parents are embarrassed when it's a subject they don't remember or were never good at, and they don't want to appear stupid in front of their child. (In fact, to the contrary, knowing a parent is knowledgeable in a particular by saying you'd love to read about the subject in his textbook. It's a refresher or new information for you, which offers both of you a subject for conversation.

More important than what you actually know is the curiosity you show about what your child is learning. A genuine interest on your part and a relaxed sharing between you and your child goes a long way to ensuring greater attention in class the following day.

Newborn development Tuning your baby in

Years ago, mothers were content rocking their babies and cooing to them.

Today, long before they even begin prenatal or parenting classes, many parents hear about ways to present the world's sounds and sights to their yet-to-be-born. Available are musical tapes to play to the womb and books that offer advice on everything from how to hold the just-born to what to say to the new baby. Stores and catalogs are full of a variety of mobiles, crib bumpers, posters and toys.

—and like? Susan Ludington, C.N.M., Ph.D., an associate professor of Maternal Child Health at the UCLA School of Nursing, and author of How to Have a Smarter Baby (Bantam Books, 1987, $4.95), found that research has long shown that babies can see clearly at birth, but can only see things with high contrast, such as a black-and-white newspaper headline or a parent's eyes.

Ludington has done her own research in infant stimulation and has made some interesting findings. When she tied a black and white mobile to babies' big toes, the infants would kick with pleasure to get the design to move. Pastel playrooms and nurseries are not fully appreciated by young babies, Ludington found, since infants are most attracted to and stimulated by high contrast. Even colors such as red and green are not seen until six months of age, owing to the natural developmental limits of the human eye.

Ludington also learned that the commonly used overhead mobile isn't seen by an infant until eight weeks of age, because of asymmetric tonic neck reflex, a normal, early reflex that causes a baby to turn his head to one side when lying on his back.

"The purpose of providing high contrast stimulation early in life," says Ludington, "is to appeal to the baby's preferences and capabilities." Providing the right stimulation encourages visual alertness, gives pleasure to babies—as evidenced by their smiles, gurgles and coos—and helps train their eye-hand coordination.

Yet Ludington warns parents not to overdo the stimulation they offer their babies. Some parents, she says, now decorate the nursery totally in black and white, with mobiles, posters, crib bumpers and sheets all offering the same high-contrast design. "Choose one or two examples that you like," she says.

Can a baby be overstimulated? Ludington says yes, and suggests parents slow down and back off when they see their baby wiggling, grimacing, thrusting his arms out in front of him, turning his eyes or head away, or sticking out his tongue. These are time-out signals, she says. "Always go with the baby's flow, capitalize on spontaneous moments of alertness, and don't try to get a baby to play with you if he wants to sleep."

Babies are most attracted to and stimulated by high contrast.

Despite the fact that Ludington believes her research can be valuable in guiding parents to provide appropriate stimulation for infants, she also says that, no matter what, "babies are going to seek out stimulation themselves." Even without the highcontrast toys and mobiles, babies will find objects of interest in their environment. "Parents have a lot of good common sense and can find effective ways to entertain their babies," Ludington says. "And up to the age of four, the thing kids need most is security and an understanding that the world can unfold for them at their own pace."

Tips on choosing the right tools and toys

- The recommended age levels on packages can be misleading. Look at what the child is doing. Is he reaching? Crawling? Toddling? Choose a toy that's appropriate to his newest challenge.
- Also look at what the child can do with his hands. Is he grasping objects? Reaching out? If he's using his fingers to poke, for example, find toys that will allow him to get results (like a jump-up surprise) when he pokes.
- Toys that make noise are better than stuffed toys that don't. Find one special stuffed animal, and keep it in the child's bed for "crib company" to function as a constant friend. Other stuffed toys should be ones that can be transformed, unzipped, or opened to provide more opportunities for exploration.
- Look for dual-purpose toys. A stuffed panda can be a child's crib companion and also offer the high contrast to which infants are attracted.

Books

Whatever your parenting question, there's probably a book to answer it

Bookstores today have shelves and shelves of parenting books, not just Dr. Spock, as was the case 25 or 30 years ago, when today's mommies were babies. There are now whole books on fears, sleeping, sharing—subjects that in the past were covered in a chapter of Dr. Spock.

In my neighborhood bookstore, Emily Andrews, who tends the children's and parenting books section, says that another change from when she was raising children 30 years ago is that today there's a general openness on all sorts of subjects that previously weren't discussed: how families cope with a child afflicted by a particular disease or disability; helping children understand birth and death. Andrews thinks that part of the reason for such interest has come from television. People discuss such problems on TV, and viewers then want to know more about the subject.

Another big change is that along with the raft of books for parents, there are books for children on the same subjects—toilet training, a new sibling, parents' divorce, plus a number of books written for teenagers addressing the problems they face.

There is also a whole new category: books about children's books. These books cover everything from how to help your child develop the habit of reading to suggested lists of books. Probably the most complete is The New York Times Parent's Guide to The Best Books for Children by Eden Ross Lipson. Also highly recommended is The New Read-Aloud Handbook, the second revised edition of Jim Trelease's popular book, originally published in 1982.

With all of this specialization, however, there is still plenty of demand for general reference books on parenting. Dr. Spock's Baby and Child Care is probably still the most popular of these reference books, more than 40 years after the date of original publication. Updated every decade, this classic reference volume was most recently revised in 1985 and coauthored by Dr. Michael B. Rothenberg. Emily Andrews stocks the book in three different editions, hardback, large paperbound (known as a "trade paperback"), and small pocketbook size, and young mothers frequently prove intolerant if the store runs out. Also in demand, however, is the revised edition of Penelope Leach's Your Child From Birth to Age Five, published this fall. Other favorites: the books by T. Berry Brazelton, M.D.; Dr. Mom, by Marianne Neifert, M.D.; and William Sears' Creative Parenting, to name only a few of the many titles available.

Andrews points out that yet another big difference between general parenting books, then and now, is that today's books distinguish between different types of babies-quiet babies, very active babies, fretful babies. = The books 30 years ago talked about a one-year-old or a twoyear-old as though there was one normal model for each age group. This set a lot of parents to worrying. Never worry-free, parenting today is at least supported by a lot of information and reassurance in the form of books.

A survival guide to the flu season

The flu "bug" is a misnomer: it's really a dragon. It sometimes hangs on for weeks and can cause not only missed work and school but also complications. such as pneumonia and ear infections. What can you do to prevent it? And how can you best cope if prevention efforts fail?

According to Gilbert Saliba. M.D., director of the Center for Infectious Disease in Los Angeles and an Assistant Clinical Professor of Medicine at UCLA. there are a few tactics that reduce the risk of contracting the flu.

First, Saliba says, stay away from crowded, enclosed places during the flu season-which usually runs from mid-fall through winter. Also, he says, strengthen your immunity, through rest and good eating, and if you're in a high-risk health group or simply want to make an extra effort to cut your flu risks, get a flu vaccine. "A vaccine contains the most prevalent strains and generally takes two weeks to become effective," says Dr. Saliba. But he says it's most likely to prevent the flu if it's given very early in the flu season, before there's a chance of being exposed to the influenza virus. (So mark your calendars now for vaccines next fall!) Saliba is neither for or against flu shots for children. But since children generally get the flu for a shorter time than adults, it's probably unnecessary to add it to the other vaccines they need.

There are two types of flu, says Dr. Saliba. Type A-the only type of flu the vaccine can prevent-causes fever, aches, cough and sore throat, while Type B combines some upper respiratory symptoms with intestinal upset and diarrhea. The flu vaccine cannot prevent Type B influenza.

Once caught, both forms of flu are extremely contagious through airborne respiratory secretions found in a sneeze or cough. "If you breathe the same air into which someone with the flu has coughed or sneezed...you've got it," says Dr. Saliba.

For those who do succumb to the flu this season, says Dr. Saliba, there is a prescription drug that can be taken by children as well as adults-Symmetrel (amatadine). Taken within 24 hours after the first symptoms appear, it will shorten the course and lessen the severity of the illness.

Dr. Saliba advises flu sufferers to rest, drink warm liquids, inhale warm steam to help cut heavy secretions, and take aspirin or acetaminophen to reduce fever.

And then turn on the television and gather together some good books or magazines, and prepare for three to five days of dragon-sized discomfort.

Disneyland AFTER 35 YEARS

By Dave Smith

At the time of Disneyland's opening on July 17, 1955, Walt Disney made a statement that proved prophetic. "Disneyland will continue to grow," he said, "to add new things—as long as there is imagination left in the world." Now 35 years later, there is still plenty of imagination left, because Disneyland is thriving. The opening last year of the highly acclaimed attraction Splash Mountain is only the latest example of how the collective imagination of the Disney designers continues to enhance a guest's experiences at Disneyland.

But, if we look back three and a half decades, we can see that Walt Disney was taking a big chance when he decided to make a major investment in building Disneyland. Nothing like this had ever been done before. In fact, Walt's staff members were met with incredulity when they described Walt's ideas for his park to amusement park operators around the country.

"You don't want to do that," the amusement park men counselled. "You don't want to waste money making sure the place is spic-and-span all the time. And how can you possibly think of a park without a midway filled with games of chance? Don't make a special effort to hire cleancut young kids; after all carnivals have been run by seasoned veterans for years, and they are best able to drag every last penny out of the patrons." Walt and his staff did not need this advice; Walt knew what he wanted to do, and he knew what the public wanted.

We've all heard the story that the idea for Disneyland began when Walt Disney would take his two daughters to zoos and carnivals. He would sit on a bench eating peanuts while Diane and Sharon rode the merry-go-round and had all the fun. Walt felt that there should be some amusement enterprise built where parents and children could go together, and all could be entertained. Walt's first ideas for this type of an amusement park took form in 1948, when he created his first descriptions of a place he called "Mickey Mouse Park."

At the Walt Disney Studio in Burbank in the early 1950s, there was more land than was needed for production purposes. Walt first thought that his park could be built there. On March 27, 1952, the Burbank Daily Review headlined a story that Walt Disney was planning to build an amusement area in Burbank—by then known as "Disneyland."

As Walt developed his plans, he came to realize that the studio land was simply not large enough to hold all his dreams. Therefore, he hired the Stanford Research Institute (SRI) to do a survey to find a new site for his proposed park. By studying traffic patterns, population centers, accessibility, climate, and other factors, SRI narrowed its search down to what it considered the ideal location-Anaheim, California. With SRI's recommendation, Walt settled on a location just off the then-under-construction Santa Ana Freeway. It almost didn't work out however, because there were 17 different parcels of land involving as many landowners. But property negotiations proved to be successful, and on May 1, 1954, the news was released that Disneyland would be built in Anaheim, and not in Burbank.

Walt Disney put together a team of designers to create his park. This group evolved into WED Enterprises (now Walt Disney Imagineering), an organization unique in corporate America. The designers, or "imagineers" as they are called (imagination + engineering), were given free reign to come up with ideas for the park. And their imaginations ran wild.

To coordinate the construction, Walt brought in a retired Navy admiral, Joe Fowler. Construction commenced in the summer of 1954, with everything aiming for an opening the following summer. On his television show, not-so-coincidentally named Disneyland, Walt presented progress reports on the fabulous park emerging from the orange groves and bean fields of Anaheim. By July, 1955, all of America eagerly awaited the unveiling.

Sunday, July 17, 1955, was the day of the grand opening, and invited guests (along with others who had managed to obtain forged tickets) flocked to Disneyland to see "what Walt had wrought." A monumental live television special conveyed the awe of the opening day visitors, and, being live, also caught occasional gaffes from the proud, beaming Walt, and his emcees Bob Cummings, Art Linkletter, and an actor who would later go on to bigger and better things, Ronald Reagan.

Walt Disney's dream had come true. Here was a park that had something for everyone. Kids delighted in the adventures but so did their parents. There were elements in each attraction to appeal to all ages. A 10-year-old might giggle at Mr. Smee attempting to pacify Captain Hook in the Peter Pan attraction, while his parents were marvelling at the mechanism which enabled the boats to fly and the skill in which ultraviolet light was used to cause the colors of Never Land to glow in the dark.

As soon as Disneyland opened, Walt Disney proved that he would keep his promise that the park would continue to grow. New attractions were added as soon as they could be designed and constructed. In 1956, guests were treated to such adventures as a Skyway between Tomorrowland and Fantasyland, Tom Sawyer Island, a Rainbow Caverns Mine Train, and Storybook Land. A summertime tradition of spectacular fireworks displays began to guests' delight. Nineteen fifty-seven saw the addition of a House of the Future and a modernistic Viewliner, a forerunner of the Monorail that would make its appearance in 1959, along with such ambitious attractions as the Submarine Voyage and the Matterhorn with its thrilling bobsleds. That same year, there was nearly a major international incident when government authorities refused permission for Soviet Chairman Nikita Khrushchev to visit Disneyland.

The 1960s saw continued growth. The monorail system was extended to service the nearby Disneyland Hotel, Flying Saucers came—and went—in Tomorrowland, Grad Nite parties provided high school graduates with a fun way to celebrate, and Tinker Bell started nightly summertime flights from the top of the Matterhorn.

Advances in technology enabled Walt to premiere Audio-Animatronics in his Enchanted Tiki Room in 1963. The new process, which brought an innovation in three-dimensional entertainment to Disneyland, was continued with four spectacular shows at the New York World's Fair the following year. At the conclusion of the Fair all of those shows, including It's a Small World and Great Moments with Mr. Lincoln, were moved to Disneyland where they would entrance guests for years to come.

Walt Disney dedicated the first new "land" to be added to Disneyland, New Orleans Square, in 1966, but unfortunately he did not live to see the opening of its most exciting attraction-Pirates of the Caribbean. Walt died on December 15, but his brother, Roy, pledged to continue Walt's plans for the park's continued expansion. The next few years saw a totally new Tomorrowland open (the present had caught up with the original Tomorrowland), as well as a ghoulishly delightful Haunted Mansion.

As the 1970s arrived, Disneyland feted its 100 millionth guest. Disneyland's "kid brother," Walt Disney World, opened in Florida in 1971, and one of its attractions, the Country Bear Jamboree, inspired a whole new "land" at Disneyland the following year—Bear Country. A special attraction honoring Walt Disney was dedicated in the Main Street Opera House, and our nation's heritage was celebrated in music with the opening of America Sings and in pageantry with America on Parade, which for two years helped guests salute the Bicentennial. Each night during the summers, a new parade twinkled down Main Street: the Electrical Parade, with delicately lit floats bringing forth choruses of oohs and aahs from the guests.

Space Mountain began thrilling Disneyland visitors in 1977, and a terrifying Abominable Snowman showed up inside the renovated Matterhorn. Big Thunder Mountain Railroad first provided guests with a harrowing journey on a runaway mine train in 1979.

As Disneyland ended its first quarter century and moved into the 1980s, more innovations were on the horizon. The original Fantasyland was completely remodelled, with original attractions updated and a totally new one added -Pinocchio's Daring Journey. For the first time, an existing Audio-Animatronics attraction, the Country Bear Jamboree, was reprogrammed to present a Country Bear Christmas Special and later a Vacation Hoedown.

Exciting collaborations with George Lucas brought innovations to Tomorrowland: Captain EO, an impressive 3-D extravaganza starring Michael Jackson and directed by Francis Coppola, and, a year later, Star Tours, with flight simulator technology being used to create a thrilling journey through space. Splash Mountain emerged in a renamed Critter Country as one of the most exciting log flume rides ever.

The Disneyland designers show no sign of resting on their laurels. Their imaginations are still running wild, and they are still thinking of great new attractions for Disneyland. Obviously, there is still a lot of imagination left in the world, and Walt Disney certainly would be proud of his park if he could see it today. Thirty-five years have not made Disneyland grow old; it is still as young and vibrant as ever. It will be exciting to see what the next 35 years bring.

DISNEYLAND'S 35th ANNIVERSARY FESTIVITIES

A year-long celebration begins on New Year's Day with a special preshow at the Rose Parade. On January 11, Art Linkletter and Bob Cummingswho were emcees at the 1955 opening ceremonies-will join Walt Disney Co. Chairman Michael Eisner for a rededication of Disneyland. Disneyland guests will find other exciting birthday festivities in the Park, with such highlights as "The Dream Machine," a year-long gift-giving event where guests have the chance of winning Geo cars, Delta airline tickets, U.S. Saving Bonds and more. The "Party Gras Parade," complete with a Latin beat and a Mardi Gras theme, features 45-foot-tall balloon sculptures of favorite Disney characters. At Videopolis, "One Man's Dream" is a musical tribute to Walt Disney's achievements. In March, there will be a special charity auction of Disneyland memorabilia. Touring the country is the "Mouseorail"—"Monorail Red," the original Disneyland monorail. And, of course, there is the actual birthday celebration itself on July 17. Those are just a few of the highlights of the biggest party in Disneyland's history.

Disneyland unveils a roller-coaster ride through the stars with Space Mountain, while bobsled riders on the Matterhorn meet an Abominable Snowman.

Imagine a magical romp through Rhymeland with your favorite fables turned upside down. Picture a star-studded lineup of rock 'n' roll stars, comedians, and actors playing cats, mice and other zany fairy tale characters. You'll discover all this—plus great fun and laughs—in Mother Goose Rock 'N' Rhyme, a wacky musical fantasy that premieres this spring on The Disney Channel.

"This is probably the most ambitious piece of work I have ever tackled," says Shelley Duvall, executive producer of Mother Goose Rock 'N' Rhyme. Duvall not only produced the movie, she also stars in the lead role as Little Bo-Peep. As the story goes, when Mother Goose (portrayed by Jean Stapleton) mysteriously disappears, Little Bo-Peep heads up a search team with Mother Goose's son, Gordon Goose (Dan Gilroy of The Breakfast Club). Together they venture on a hilarious odyssey through Rhymeland, questioning its inhabitants on Mother Goose's whereabouts. Along the way they meet Mary and her not-so-little Lamb, Lou (played by Cyndi Lauper and Woody Harrelson), Old King Cole (none other than Little Richard), Simple Simon (who else but Paul Simon), Bobby Brown as the Three Blind Mice, and a cast of other colorful characters.

The story also features the ditzy duo of Garry Shandling and Teri Garr as Jack and Jill, Harry Anderson as the Pied Piper, and Howie Mandel as a very hefty Humpty Dumpty. With outrageous costumes, fantasy sets and a great musical score, Mother Goose Rock 'N' Rhyme treats fairy tales in a way you've never seem before.

LANTERN HILL

A Disney Channel Premiere Film

Co-written, produced and directed by Kevin Sullivan; starring Sam Waterston, Colleen Dewhurst, Mairon Bennett, and Sarah Polley.

Premieres Saturday, January 27, at 7:00 p.m. (ET/PT)

Airs: February 1, 5, 11, 19, 24

Also from Kevin Sullivan:

Anne of Green Gables Anne of Avonlea

Anne of Green Gables airs in January, followed by Anne of Avonlea in February. Both are presented in four one-hour episodes; episodes debut Mondays at 8:00 p.m. and encore Saturdays at 6:00 p.m., beginning January 8.

SAM WATERSTON DOESN'T READ HIS reviews. Years back he avoided them like laryngitis on opening night. Today he regards the critic's word with the superfluous air of an artist content with his oeuvre. Not that he has any reason to worry. Film and stage critics love Waterston—in over 25 years in show business he has rarely received a negative review.

In conversation, Waterston intertwines the philosophical and personal with ease, often marking his words with a quizzical pause. "I haven't read reviews for years," he maintains. "When you're making something you're taking it out of yourself and your imagination and experience. You have to have confidence that that is sufficient...confidence is the key."

If experience breeds confidence, Sam Waterston has reason to be self-assured. Dauntless, quiet, stoic—Waterston is an actor of infinite variety. His portrayal of Andrew Stuart in The Disney Channel Premiere Film Lantern Hill is another in a line of strong performances as the romantic hero. In Lantern Hill, Waterston plays a middle-aged writer living in isolation on Prince Edward Island since the breakup of his marriage some 10 years earlier. His estranged wife, Robin, and his daughter, Jane, now live in Toronto with Robin's mother. Thinking her father is dead, Jane is shocked to find he is very much alive—especially when he sends a letter requesting a visit from Jane. Robin explains to Jane that she left her father because he loved someone else. This discovery ignites a passion in Jane, and she becomes determined to reunite her parents—little realizing that her father's sister Irene has hatched a plot to marry Andrew to a wealthy friend.

"Lantern Hill is a good, old-fashioned, romantic story," Waterston says. "It's about love hanging on, loyalties remaining, and a miraculous reuniting." Waterston also points out that Lantern Hill fulfills his longtime wish to make a film his four children can watch.

When Waterston was a child in New England he watched his father, a language professor and theater buff, direct productions at a local school. The energetic tyke's debut performance—a lofty feat for a six-year-old—was in Antigone, directed by his dad. Waterston is quick to make light of his prodigious beginnings. "At that age I didn't really think of it as acting," he says, "I thought of it as getting to stay up late with my father.

"I always wanted to perform, I felt very lucky that way," he adds. While fellow students in high school and college were fraught with worry over career decisions, Waterston says he was always certain his life would encompass theater in one form or another: "All I worried about was whether I was a fool to try it and whether I'd get away with it!"

The moment that clinched it for Waterston occurred during a Yale production of Waiting For Godot. In the midst of a performance, Waterston remembers feeling "a palpable sensation of control running from my fingers out to the audience. It was a unique experience because I figured out how to play the part on the stage while I was doing it. Everything was working in synch—it was an enormous rush.

'Usually these things come in dribs and drabs," he adds. For his junior year of college, Waterston traipsed off to Paris and wound up training with expatriate American director John Berry. After a year he returned to New York, eager to finish school and make his mark. Drips and drabs turned to leaps and bounds as Waterston began working in stage. film and television—and finding success in all three. He remembers the charge he felt one day back in 1962 when he opened a copy of Life magazine to find a six-page photo frenzy on the current production in which he was starring, Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Sadbefore it had hit Broadway.

Waterston's promising talent and his ability to elude the constraints of one medium were rare gifts. For Waterston TV, stage, and film represented three outlets for the same occupation. Television offered roles of historic import. Stage was a vehicle for the immediate high—the ultimate fusion of sound, light and dialogue. And film provided the luxury of time to polish a performance—as long as the budget allowed.

Waterston was soon acting with some of the greats—often to pull the rug out from under the lead. This scenario proved true in his first role in a major motion picture, The Great Gatsby. Critics heralded Waterston's portrayal of Nick Carroway, the pensive and loyal friend of Jay Gatsby (played by Robert Redford). Some reviewers went as far as to say that Waterston should have played Redford's role. Regardless, The Great Gatsby was a coup for the young actor and an opportunity to work with a major Hollywood star.

"Redford made a point of forewarning the young actors not to be bedazzled," Waterston recalls. "He used to say 'Just because you're working on a great big picture and people are driving you to work in big fancy cars, worrying whether you stub your toe, it's just temporary."

"His point was that there was no deep feeling behind it," Waterston continues. "While you were useful you were cherished. It reminded me of something my father used to say to me quite a bit: 'Success is like smoking, it's probably okay as long as you don't inhale it."

In Waterston's 25-plus years in the business he's played opposite Liv Ullmann ("She's a delight"), Woody Allen ("Woody likes to be kept secret so I'll leave that alone"), and the quirky dame of American film, Katharine Hepburn, to name a few. He vividly recalls performing with Hepburn in The Glass Menagerie. "The most important thing I got from working with Kate was to make the work itself important.

"Kate has this way about her of investing every single moment of every working day with a tremendous amount of meaning. She said once that the reason she did that was that acting was basically a silly and embarrassing thing for grown-ups to be doing!"

In one amusing incident, Hepburn "got in a great froth" on the set of The Glass Menagerie over Waterston's turtleneck sweater. "She thought it was unflattering to my Adam's apple," he remembers, laughing. "She ran around trying to get me worried and the director all charged up about it. She demanded that something be done about it before the whole film was ruined!"

As silly as the incident may have seemed, Waterston reflects that part of Hepburn's brilliance as an actor is her obstinate attention to detail. "After you've been in this business a long time you start to think of every role as just another job," he explains. "I learned from her to be absolutely adamant about avoiding routine."

Like Hepburn, Waterston has avoided a strong association with a single character or type. His "clean-the-slate" approach to the actor's craft led director Roland Joffe to consider Waterston for the lead in The Killing Fields, the 1983 film based on the true story of a foreign correspondent caught in the mire of war-ridden Cambodia. Waterston remembers feeling mesmerized the first time he read the script. "I wanted to do the movie very badly. I chased them like crazy for the role. I just wouldn't take no for an answer." Waterston's instincts were right on target. His charged performance garnered him an Academy Award nomination for Best Actor that year.

This recognition from his peers was a longtime coming. Still, Waterston maintains the choices he's made in his career have seldom been driven by money or visibility. "I've always chosen roles for the potential thrill or challenge. Sometimes you're lucky and they're celebrated things."

Celebrated or not, Waterston remains indifferent towards reviews, believing that theater is too often a convenient topic critics use to fill up space. "Critics are simply glad you gave them the opportunity to say something sharp or witty—rather than anything essential." He adds, "Every once in awhile someone says to me, 'Did you read the wonderful review the Times gave you?' and I get a twinge of temptation. But I resist it."

Based on a popular book by Lucy Maud Montgomery, Lantern Hill is the moving story of a young girl who dreams of reuniting her parents. Mairon Bennett is the imaginative Jane; Sam Waterston plays her estranged father; Colleen Dewhurst is the mysterious neighbor who helps Jane realize her dream.

PLAYING CAROLE IT KING FRISKY

The day after Carole King's sellout performance in Los Angeles this past summer, one review's headline read "Mellow Pop Icon Plays It Frisky." Since the release of her number-one album Tapestry in 1971, King has been proving to audiences that she's just as comfortable making the earth move as she is singing soulful ballads. The most successful female songwriter of all time, King collaborated with Gerry Goffin and others on over 200 hit songs, including "Natural Woman," "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow," and "So Far Away." Her latest album City Streets (Capitol Records) is a collage of melodies and lyrics that return to King's New York City roots. The Disney Channel captured the excitement of her music in Carole King: Going Home (premiering Sunday, February 18, at 9:00 p.m., Eastern/Pacific time). The Disney Channel Magazine caught up with King after the filming of her Going Home concert.

The Disney Channel: What does "Going Home" mean to you?

Carole King: I'm returning to the energy of the city and the streets—where I'm from and where I've come back to.

TDC: How does it feel to be performing again? CK: Great! This is the best I have ever felt performing. I was a bit apprehensive at first, but after a few dates we decided to add more. I've got a great band and the energy is phenomenal.

TDC: Are people seeing a new Carole King? CK: Absolutely. I was always confined by the piano and now I get out from behind the keyboards, play guitar and really rock. The audience reaction is wonderful—with all my traditional fans plus some new, younger ones.

TDC: Did you always want to be a performer? CK: No. I always wanted to be an actress like my mom [Gingold Eugenia]. I even went to the High School of Performing Arts 'til I realized I wanted a normal childhood. Then music just happened.

TDC: When was the first time you sang in front of an audience?

CK: I was playing piano for James Taylor in his show and one night he said, "Why don't we let Carole sing one of her songs?" I did "Up On the Roof," which James always loved. I was always shy about singing in front of people but that turned it around.

TDC: "You've Got a Friend" is another one of your classics. Was it written for someone in particular?

CK: No. That song was pure inspiration. I just sat down at the piano and the music came from the source—with a capital "S"—inside of me. Some songs are more crafted but this one wrote itself. "Ain't That the Way" on my new album was very much inspired in the same way.

TDC: Songs like "Legacy" and "City Streets" deal with some tough issues. Do you think musicians should have a political agenda?

CK: I believe musicians have a responsibility first and foremost to entertain. If along the way they can educate and enlighten that's great. My goal is to make people feel, to touch them.

TDC: Do you need pain and turmoil in your life to create?

CK: This has been a question in my life since I first became an artist. Probably so. I don't go looking for it—many artists don't know what to do if they're happy. But I seek the joy in life and try to create in both. I know the pain will come back soon enough.

TDC: What is the thread that runs through your music—that gives it such lasting power? CK: Feelings, emotions, expressed on a very simple, gut level.

TDC: Who did you listen to as a young musician?

CK: I loved Dylan, the Beatles.

TDC: John Lennon and Paul McCartney once said in an interview that they wanted to be the next Goffin and King.

CK: It all goes around and comes around. I was extremely complimented.

TDC: What contemporary music do you like? CK: I like Bruce Springsteen, RAP music (that doesn't promote violence), Neneh Cherry. I do aerobics and am exposed to some great dance music! I'd like to write some dance songs with substance—not just fluff lyrics.

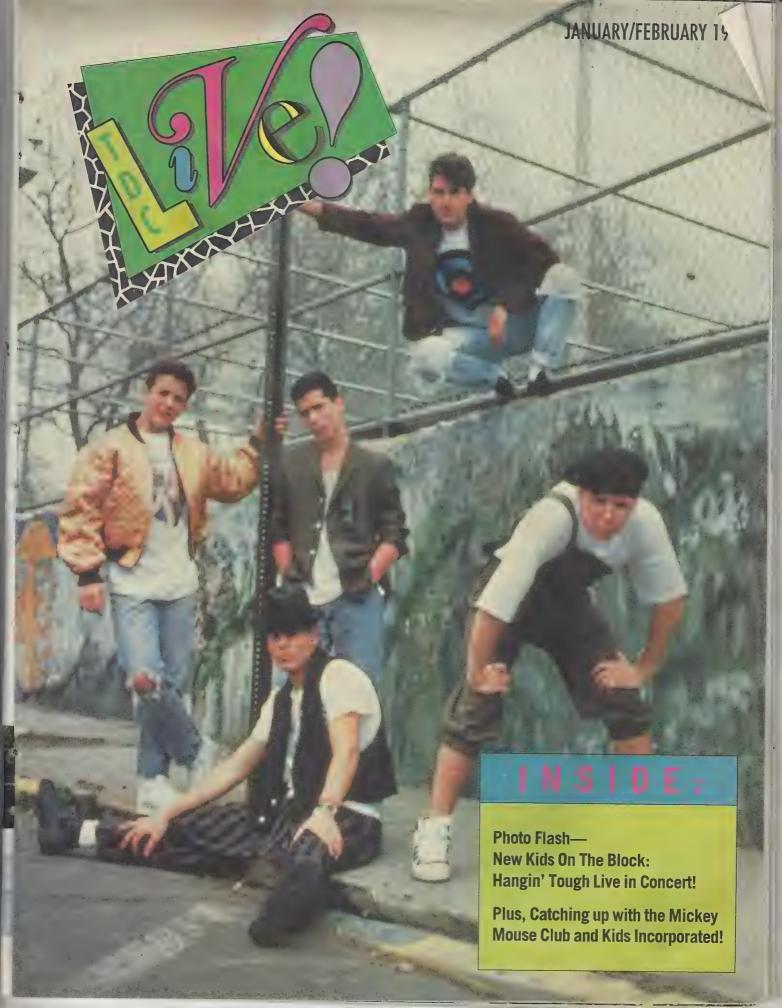

TDC: What else is in store?

CK: I don't like to plan. But I've been doing a lot of acting in plays and some film roles. I love challenges. I was on The Tracey Ullman Show and had to learn a dance routine from Paula Abdul—that was a challenge!

TDC: This month you and Gerry Goffin will be inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame.

CK: When Tapestry came out I was overwhelmed by the success of the album and all the appreciation, so this is amazing. I'm just grateful that I've been able to spend my life doing what I love to do and touching so many people in a positive way.

ceived hundreds of letters from kids all over the country! Thanks for sharing your favorite jokes, stories, stars and hobbies with us—we had a lot of laughs reading them. Marc Thomann from Wyckoff, New York told us a hilarious story about dropping cotton candy in his cat's fur—a "hairy" situation to explain to his mom! But that wasn't half as funny as when Dana Rehberg from Bellport, New York put her face in the birthday cake... talk about the life of the party!

Sherry McKirchy from Chicago couldn't believe it when her whole class failed a social studies test last April. Sherry demanded a recount and the teacher burst out laughing—she was playing an April Fool's Day trick on her students!

Anne of Green Gables and Anne of Avonlea were directed by Kevin Sullivan, and he's got another great film on The Disney Channel this month: LANTERN HILL. It's an exciting adventure starring Mairon Bennett and Sarah Polley.

During the production of Lantern Hill Mairon and Sarah became great friends and started a hilarious newsletter called the "Avonlea Chronicle." You might also recognize Mairon's brother Zachary, the adorable guy in Looking For Miracles last fall. Watch for Zach and Sarah in the upcoming series AVONLEA. Keep those letters coming!

Love Hewitt is a "Living Doll"—that's what a panel of judges decided back in 1988 when Love won the Texas Living Doll pageant. 1988 was a big year for Love; she also captured top prizes in two other talent contests, toured the USSR and Denmark with the Texas Show Team, and starred in the national L.A. Gear touring company. But nothing—not even her Barbie Doll commercial—prepared her for the excitement of becoming a member of Kids Incorporated! Love is a natural addition to the fun cast that sings and dances at the P*lace. Her birthday is February 21, 1979, and she has spent 6 of her 10 years in ballet, tap and jazz classes. With talent like Love's, she'll be reaching for the stars!

Sean O'Riordan's life has been one adventure after another. Born in Fall River, Massachusetts, in 1967, Sean soon moved to Ireland with his family. There he spent most of his childhood. When the O'Riordans moved back to Killington, Vermont, he became a freestyle skiing champion. But Sean realized his first love was acting, so he headed off to London to be professionally trained.

Like many actors, Sean decided Los Angeles was the place to be to pursue his career. While auditioning, he had some crazy jobs, including piercing ears at Venice Beach and working for Olivia Newton-John. Sean says his role as Flip on Kids Incorporated is his greatest adventure yet!
